Topic: Fibromyalgia Education Module

The topic of my final project is an educational e-learning module that will provide information about the medical condition of Fibromyalgia. After completing this e-module, learners will be able to demonstrate knowledge of Fibromyalgia by identifying and describing the condition, it’s symptoms, causes, current treatments and current research on the condition. The final project will be about 12–15 minutes in length and will consist of 12 to 15 slides at about a minute each. It will employ the use of text, animation, audio and graphics, audio narration, and video to reinforce the information.

Below in Table 1, is the concept analysis graphic which shows the basic concept groups into which I sorted the basic information I found during my research into Fibromyalgia. These categories are: the definition, symptoms, causes, how the condition is diagnosed, and its treatments.

Fibromyalgia Project Concept Analysis

As seen below in Table 2, the Task Analysis shows the method of presenting information about Fibromyalgia by breaking the information down into the subject, the definition, how to diagnose the condition, it's symptoms, it's treatments, and a review of the information that was presented.

Table 3 and 4 below, show a storyboard of a rough plan of the flow and order of the delivery of the e-learning module content. The module will have slides, with each one lasting about one minute.
